Ari-Armaturen Group has acquired all outstanding shares of Högfors Oy, a Finnish butterfly manufacturer from its current owners.

Högfors develops and manufactures a wide range of manual and automated butterfly valves and also provides ball valves both for a vast variety of applications in the power and process industry. Since its establishment in 1927 Högfors has become a trusted partner with a strong market position namely in the district heating industry.

ARI-Armaturen Group is a German family owned company that was founded in 1950. It has over 800 employees and operates directly in 16 countries and has a partnership network in over 50 countries worldwide.

Högfors will complement ARI's wide product program of industrial valves, especially in the area of metal-seated High-Performance butterfly valves. At the same time, Högfors will benefit from synergies in sales, production, sourcing and engineering.

"We are very excited about this great new opportunity to be able to expand our value proposition to our customers worldwide" notes Mr. Dietmar Roehrmann, Head of Global Sales and Marketing of ARI.

"We strongly believe that ARI is a perfect owner for Högfors and its employees, supporting its future growth and development" says Mr. Pekka Karhumäki, Chairman of the board at Högfors.
